JONES BEACH •

People-watching is great, isn't it? No more so than when all is laid bare, as is the case in Joseph Szabo's Jones Beach collection. Szabo takes New York's Jones Beach as his context to capture the brawn, the babes, the young and the old with the same unflinching lens, and successfully displays the near poetic coexistence of these groups relaxing in the sun. The warmth of summer radiates from every single page. MJW

EYES WIDE SHUT •

We always knew futuristic menswear designer Romain Kremer was a bit of a pioneer. If he had his way, we would all be walking around this season wearing masks and bumping into walls. But if you don't fancy suffocating under all that lycra, it's well worth investing in the stainless steel Mykita sunglasses with shutters. "Today's answer to everyday masks" are perfect for shutting out the world, as Romain intended. MH
